TESTING DYNAMITE SHELLS—PROSPECTS OF A CHANGE IN NAVAL WARFARE—EXPERIMENTS AT SANDY HOOK.

During the last summer a party of from three to five persons might frequently have been seen taking the boat to Governor's Island or Sandy Hook. Their movements were mysterious and their conversation was carried on in guarded tones. At times they were accompanied by persons known to be members of the United States Ordnance Board. It is well known that various trials of dynamite projectiles have taken place at the Ordnance Proving Grounds at Sandy Hook. Compressed air guns and other inventions have been tested but have failed to give full satisfaction. It is admitted by all military authorities that if dynamite shells can be safely discharged from ordinary cannon with powder charges, it will create a revolution in naval and land siege operations. The difficulty has been that the concussion from the explosion of the gunpowder explodes the dynamite before it leaves the gun. Since Nobel discovered dynamite the various European nations, especially Russia and Prussia have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in unsuccessful attempts to overcome this difficulty. It seems to have been left for a Yankee to succeed in it in the birthplace of the torpedo, which has been thought ... of England ... Fulton blew up the Danish brig Dorothea in Deal Harbor in 1811.

The party alluded to was composed of ... H. Snyder and assistants who have perfected a system of ... shells and ... balls in connection with a projectile by which dynamite shells ... are discharged from cannon ... powder, fired with ... of projectiles.

The recent operations at Sandy Hook have been kept a profound secret. ... reporters have been allowed upon the grounds or have heretofore been able to get in any definite information. A Tribune reporter lately visited Mr. Snyder for the purpose of ascertaining the results of his experiments. Mr. Snyder has been for a number of years engaged in torpedo and ... experiments not only in this country but abroad, and was associated with Colonel John H. Hay, M. A. Ba... and Martin Hubbe in developing the famous Lay torpedo which is controlled in its movements by electricity. He also took an active part in the late war between Chili and Peru, holding a commission under the Peruvian Government. He said:

"I have no particular objections to letting the public know what I have accomplished, but you know that if I open myself to interviews on the subject of dynamite it will be hard for me to keep out of the range of your flying artillery reporters. In this respect I have already been the attacking point of many of scribes, but I will give you what information I can consistently.

"My preliminary experiments began about three years ago with a three-quarter inch bore shotgun, from which I fired shells charged with from one to one and a half ounces of dynamite. I perfected the system so that I safely fired from the shoulder. I then began increasing the size of my gun until my present experiments are made with a gun of six inches calibre. I consider that the system is so well developed now that dynamite shells can be fired from guns of the largest calibre, and that as long a range can be secured as with ordinary projectiles. From the six inch guns of the old pattern, which are considered obsolete for modern warfare, I have fired projectiles charged with from eight to ten pounds of the strongest grade of dynamite.

The system is applicable to all kind of guns and the shells can be fired from breech or muzzle-loading, smooth bore or rifled ordnance."

"How large charges of dynamite could you fire from cannon?"

"That would depend upon the size of the gun, its calibre and length of bore. I think a shell loaded with—at the lowest—one hundred pounds of dynamite can be safely fired from a fifteen inch gun."

"How great a charge of dynamite would you think sufficient to sink a modern iron clad, say of the size of the Devastation or Intrepid of the English navy?"

"I think that twenty five or thirty pounds, striking the vessel broadside on, would completely disable her, though it might not sink her at once. The chances are, however, that it would. The effect of a dynamite shell exploding against an iron clad would be similar to a blow given by a ram or a shock from the heaviest artillery at short range, while neither might pierce her armor, the crushing effect would be to disarrange her interior so that her engines would be useless."

"Are you familiar with the experiments recently made at Annapolis by the Naval Bureau of Ordnance to test the efficiency of dynamite against iron targets?"

"I only know of them what I have read in the newspapers. I have seen it stated that dynamite exploded against an iron target would not do much damage, and that to be effective it would have to enter the target before exploding. This I do not believe. It may have been left for the Naval Bureau of Ordnance to discover that dynamite is harmless and that it can be exploded against ironclads with impunity, yet I doubt if the result of the Annapolis experiments will deter the European Powers from continuing to expend the millions of dollars they are constantly appropriating for the manufacture of torpedoes. I do not believe it is possible to penetrate a hard substance like iron or stone with a dynamite shell, as the explosion of the dynamite by the shell's striking the target would be as quick as the velocity of the shell itself, and even if it could penetrate before explosion, I do not think that the effect would be more destructive to a heavily armored vessel."

"You speak of torpedoes, what do you mean by torpedoes?"

"I should appeal from Webster in defining a modern war torpedo, and say that the torpedo of the present day is an expert way of exploding dynamite, or similar high explosives, without being there yourself, whether in the heavens above, the earth beneath or the waters under the earth. There have been some experiments at Fort Lafayette by Mr. Windsor and others with an air gun in firing dynamite and also by Mr. Keeley, of motor fame at Sandy Hook.

"I have no doubt that it is practicable to fire dynamite shells from air guns, but it is utterly impossible to compress air sufficiently to secure any velocity or range that would bear any comparison with gunpowder. Light projectiles at short range can be thrown by compressed air. This is no new thing, however, for wind guns have been used for years, and bear about the same comparison to cannon that a bow and arrow in the hands of a Comanche Indian would to a Sharp's rifle in the hands of an expert sharpshooter. Compressed air is considered by those unacquainted with it to be a safer motor than gunpowder, but at high pressure it is quite dangerous. I would rather stand within 100 yards of a gun exploded by gunpowder than at the same distance from a flask exploded by compressed air, as it would throw the fragments further. The same is true of a steam boiler. It is impracticable with any machinery now devised to compress and hold air at above 2,000 pounds pressure to the square inch. Yet it is well known by ordnance men that with gunpowder, for high velocities a pressure of 30,000 pounds per square inch is often attained, and it is seldom used below 12,000 pounds. This will give some idea of the relative merits of compressed air and gunpowder."

"What was the nature of your experiments at Sandy Hook before the United States Ordnance Board?"

"The experiments were made to put beyond doubt the fact that dynamite can safely be fired from any kind of ordnance, and in the various trials I have fired both land and water projectiles."

"Do you consider dynamite dangerous to handle in ordinary warfare?"

"From my own experience it is no more dangerous to handle than gunpowder, and in some respects not as much so. For instance, a spark of fire which would explode powder if dropped into dynamite would be harmless. All that is necessary is to guard against a sudden shock or blow. With this precaution it can be safely handled. Since the invention of dynamite I believe that if a record could be obtained of the accidents from its use and from the use of gunpowder it would be shown that gunpowder has the largest percentage of victims."

Mr. Snyder exhibited a piece of iron weighing thirty-five pounds, into which a quantity of brass had been fused so thoroughly as if it had been through the brazier's hands. Asked what it was he said:

"That is a piece of a wrought iron target ten inches thick, and is a small part of a ton of iron which was knocked off the target by the explosion of a shell containing nine and a half pounds of dynamite fired from a six inch cannon. In this piece portions of the brass shell have been so thoroughly amalgamated with the iron that the most scientific of metallurgists would be puzzled to explain how this homogeneous combination of iron and brass could be formed so instantaneously. When we consider that the heat required to fuse iron and brass with all the aid of chemicals is beyond the measurement of any known instrument, and also consider the almost minute shortness of the time in which the fusing was accomplished we can form a faint idea of the tremendous power exerted in velocity at the point of contact. The greatest heat produced by velocity yet known is that of exploding nitro-glycerine, ... produced by electricity."

Sea Coast Defences

ANNUAL REPORT OF GEN. NEWTON, CHIEF OF ENGINEERS.

Gen. John Newton, Chief of Engineers, has submitted his annual report to the Secretary of War on the subject of sea coast and lake frontier defences. He says that the sole object of coast forts and batteries has been to prevent hostile fleets from approaching near enough to our important seaports to destroy public establishments, and to levy contributions and contributions. The contribution which could be levied from New York alone would probably pay four or five fold the cost of all the fortifications of the important harbors of the country. In early periods these ... depended for ... in certain important cases were projected ... for a length of time sufficient to gather and concentrate a force to drive the invaders back to their ships, but in the present ... facilities of communication and the population increase, the defences on the land side were reduced to a minimum.

Between 1812 and 1861 the transition from sail vessels to steamers and from ... population to 50,000,000, developed such ready means of throwing large forces upon threatened points that a hostile debarkation with the view of capturing our forts by a regular siege on land is not considered probable. This secures the advantage of being attacked only by ships, and our forts and batteries need protection on the land only sufficient to prevent a successful attempt from boarding parties to take them in the rear by surprise, for the purpose of spiking and disabling the guns and blowing up the small magazines intended for the service of the guns. In former times these were placed near our cities, at present the engineers are moving them farther down the harbors, and it is considered advisable to place them not less than seven miles from the places to be defended. These sea coast forts simply defend the narrow channels leading to the harbor.

The report discusses at some length the subject of torpedoes and modern heavy ordnance, and concludes. The Board of Engineers for fortifications has prepared approximate estimates of the cost of fortifications including the armaments of modern heavy guns and rifled mortars for Portland, Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Hampton Roads, New Orleans and San Francisco, and another estimate, likewise, approximate for the preliminary works, earth and masonry, without armor, machinery and guns to serve as emplacements for the guns. The total estimate, including armaments, is $7,488,000. The estimate for the emplacement of guns, excluding armor, guns and machinery, is $10,488,000. These estimates have been made with care, and it is believed that the fortifications, including guns of all harbors on the coast of sufficient importance to tempt an enemy, can be prepared ... not to exceed $90,000,000.

"Bagging" Bad Indians

A DEPUTY MARSHAL'S EXPERIENCE IN THE LAND OF THE REDSKINS

One of the chief attractions at the recent southern Arkansas fair, at Fort Smith, was a band of Pawnee Indians who gave vivid representations of stage robbing in the olden days, writes a correspondent from Fort Smith, Ark., to the St. Louis Globe-Democrat. They were in charge of Capt. J. W. Marks, a man some thirty-five years old, of Kentucky parentage and educated in Clay county, Mo. This gentleman has probably had as much experience in the way of arresting Indian criminals as any one white man, and the following instances are given of dangerous arrests made by him in a wild country where the law has few friends.

It was in 1881, after having spent some nine years as scout, guide and special agent for the government and private parties, that he received the appointment of deputy United States marshal under United States Marshal V. Dill, of the Osage agency, being the first civil officer to ride in that country. On his first trip he arrested eight Osages of the big Hill band, but would never have succeeded in getting them out of the country had he not been thoroughly posted on Indian tactics and superstitions. He had not proceeded far on his way until a rescuing party, numbering about thirty braves, started in pursuit. Expecting this would be the case, he took refuge in a little box shanty with his prisoners, and when the pursuing Indians came up, opened a parley with them in their own dialect, telling them that the "Great Father" at Fort Smith had ordered him to take the prisoners to that place, dead or alive, and if a rescue was attempted he would kill them all before they could take them. They finally gave up the idea of molesting the officer and returned to their reservation. Marks then brought the prisoners to Fort Smith, and they were all sent to Detroit, being charged with stealing horses.

He continued riding in the Osage country after this without molestation, ridding the country almost entirely of criminals—that is those of the Osage tribe.

About the 28th of July, 1881, however, he was given a writ for the arrest of a member of the Osages' band, named Little Buck, who had wantonly murdered a white man a short time previous. Little Buck had left the reservation, and Marks, accompanied by one man as a posse, started in pursuit. After riding four days, they struck the trail, and by travelling all night surprised Little Buck and four companions, early on the morning of Aug. 1, in camp on Silver Lake. Little Buck was coming up from the lake with water, and with the exception of a bowie knife was unarmed. Marks covered him with a six-shooter, and ordered him to surrender, when he threw up his hands as if to comply. Marks then ordered his partner to handcuff him, but as he approached, the stalwart Indian suddenly thrust him to one side, throwing him violently to the ground, and the next instant was rushing at Marks with drawn knife. A well directed shot from Marks' ... brought ... to the ground. The whole thing transpired so quickly that the other Indians had not time to collect their thoughts, and before they could secure their guns themselves the weapons were all in possession of the marshal, and he arrested the other four, who were wanted for larceny, without trouble.

Little Buck died in a short time after being wounded, and while they were attending to him, one of the savages darted away and made good his escape. Marks then made a forced march to the agency, knowing that his life would be in imminent danger as soon as Little Buck's friends heard of his death, and in this he was correct, for before reaching the agency he was overtaken by a crowd of Indians but kept them at a safe distance by giving them to understand that he would kill the prisoners if they attacked him. He kept the prisoners at the agency three days, then slipped out in the night with them, and reached Fort Smith by a circuitous route, eluding the friends of the prisoners, who were waylaying the road, determined on rescuing their comrades.

On his next trip, however, he met with an accident which came near costing him his life. He was in pursuit of a notorious horse thief named Bill Kenyon, and had come separated from his posse. About 9 o'clock at night he came upon the thief, who had stopped at a house near the Kansas line, and when Marks rode up Kenyon recognized him and ran out the back door, where his horse was tied. He mounted and started through the hills, while Marks had to go round the fence. After a chase of about two miles through the timber the pursuer came in pursuit ... shooting distance of each other, and several shots were exchanged. Kenyon's horse was killed, and that of Marks was shot in the leg. This caused the animal to swerve from his course, and both horse and rider went over a rocky bluff, the horse falling on Marks and breaking two of his ribs, besides otherwise bruising him. The horse ... was so badly hurt ... to get up. Horse and rider both remained where they had fallen until morning, when by some good fortune a Kansas farmer came over the line to get a load of wood, and Marks employed him to take him to Arkansas City, Kan., where he remained for over two months before he was able to travel.

Mexico's Silver King.

HOW A CITIZEN BECAME A NOBLEMAN WITH ROYAL WEALTH—A NATIONAL PAWNSHOP.

Everybody who knows much about Mexico has heard of Senor Don Pedro Romero de Terreros, the first Count of Regla—who was plain Peter Terreros till a lucky mining adventure made him one of the richest men of the last century. His good fortune occurred in this wise. In olden times the waters of the famous Real del Monte mines were lifted out of Santa Brigida and other shafts in numerous buckets of ox hide, and carried up on windlasses—a method that is still much in vogue in all the mining sections of Mexico. When ores lie near the surface this simple method has its great advantages, but after a considerable depth has been reached it often fails to keep down the flood of water. And so it happened that the Real del Monte became a ... for no wreck is more complete than that which water makes when it once gets possession of a mine and mingles timbers, loosened earth and fallen rock in one floating mass.

According to the mining laws of Mexico, the title to a mine is lost by ceasing to work it, and it then becomes open to the enterprise of any who may care to denounce it. In this country, as in California, the title to the soil includes no exclusive rights to whatever mineral riches it may be found to contain. Gold and silver are regarded in law as treasure trove, and can carry with them to the lucky discoverer the right to enter upon another man's possession and appropriate as much of them as may be necessary to avail himself of the prize. Peter Terreros—then a shop keeper of limited means—conceived what was first considered the wildest of projects, viz: to drain the abandoned Real del Monte by means of a tunnel through the solid rock, a mile and a quarter long, from the level of the street to the Santa Brigida shaft. He toiled with varying success—from 1739 to 1762—when he struck a marvelous bonanza, which, for the next twelve years, yielded an amount of silver that in our days would appear fabulous. Plain Peter became a count, so enormously wealthy that he furnished cause for more fables than Croesus of old. When his son, the last count, was christened the party walked from house to church—a considerable distance—on bars of solid silver.

His wife—who quarrelled with the queen, soon after blossomed from Mrs. Terreros into a full blown Countess—desiring to placate that representative of royalty, sent her a costly olive branch in the form of a satin slipper entirely covered with most magnificent diamonds. Count de Regla invited the King of Spain to visit his Mexican territories, and by way of inducement assured him that the hoofs of his Majesty's horses should touch nothing but ingots of silver all the way from Vera Cruz to the city of Mexico, that his feet should not tread upon the ground while in the New World, but always upon pavements of solid silver, and that every apartment in which his Majesty lodged should be lined with the same precious metal. All this may have been bravado, but certain proof of the del Regla wealth is found in the fact that he loaned the King $1,000,000 (which was never paid) and that he caused two ships of the largest tonnage to be built at Havana of mahogany and cedar at his own expense and presented them to his sovereign. During his twelve years of prosperity he expended more than $6,000,000 in the purchase of plantations and spent colossal fortunes on his mines and refining works.

He it was who founded the celebrated Monte de Piedad in the City of Mexico—one of the most beneficent institutions in the world—and in the year 1775 endowed it with $300,000. The name Monte de Piedad means literally "mountain of pity," and was not misapplied, for during more than a hundred years this national pawnshop was a sure protection to the public from the ruinous exactions of usurers—by whom, no doubt, Peter Terreros had suffered in his days of obscurity. It was scrupulously regulated and protected by the government, and was intended solely to assist the needy in times of temporary embarrassment by lending money—on liberal terms and at reasonable rates of interest—on deposits of jewelry, plate, merchandise and other movable articles. Alike in peace and war, and through changing forms of government, its honor was held sacred and its trust unmolested during all the revolutions and overturnings that had devastated the country. It is estimated that for a period of one hundred and nine years it afforded assistance daily to more than two hundred people.

Growing Very Close.

Never before have the returns from any election been so conflicting, confusing and kaleidoscopic in their changing phases, as those which have come in during the past thirty-six hours from the Presidential field. Twice the Democrats in this city celebrated a supposed victory—first on Tuesday evening and again last night—and each time the subsequent news sent them home in discouragement and despair. The Republicans have preserved more self-control, but their interest has been no less intense, while they have maintained a sturdy confidence in the final result.

The despatches from ten o'clock last evening to 1 o'clock this morning were almost uniformly encouraging to the Republicans, but just as we were preparing to close our forms, and only a few moments after a telegram had been received stating that Mr. Hendricks conceded that the Associated Press returns indicated Cleveland's defeat in New York, another despatch came giving the claims of the World, Herald and Times that the State had gone Democratic by two to three thousand, while the Tribune still insisted that it has been carried by Blaine.

The margin claimed is so close that the official figures will undoubtedly be required to determine the verdict of the State, as a very slight percentage would affect so close a result.

The latest despatches report both sides claiming Indiana, Virginia, Florida and Michigan, while Illinois and Wisconsin are strongly Republican and the Pacific Slope is solid for Blaine. Our friends are also claiming a good prospect of carrying West Virginia, but this is disputed by the Democrats, although large Republican gains are conceded.

The contest for the Presidential Electors has become so remarkably close in several States that the full returns will be awaited with a constantly deepening interest, and we defer comment until the result is authoritatively ascertained.

The New York Tribune's Tribute to Mr. Blaine.

It is the most marvelous feature of this marvelous display of power that not one phrase uttered by Mr. Blaine has given even to malignant foes an opportunity of criticism. Neither in his letter of acceptance nor in his many impromptu speeches has a single word occurred which his foes have tried to use against the Republic in cause or any of its defenders. Courteous to opponents, he has conciliated even where he has most powerfully assailed. With the accusations and passions raging like waves of an angry sea about him, he has been calm, dignified, true to himself and his cause, and confident in the justice of the American people. The thousand traps that lie at the feet of every Presidential candidate who ventures to open his lips, multiplied here a thousand-fold by the base devices of his foes, Mr. Blaine has in every case passed unharmed. He stands to-day more secure in the confidence and love of the American people than any other man has been since Abraham Lincoln.

Protection Sentiment in England.

[Phila. Press.]

The Earl of Dunraven, who moved in the House of Lords, Saturday, for the appointment of a joint commission from the Houses of Lords and Commons to inquire into the cause of the depressed condition of trade and agriculture, is the same gentleman who presided at a meeting in Bennington last November, held for the purpose of agitating the subject of a return to Protection. At that meeting the Earl of Dunraven took the position that far from free trade the customs duties of England were arranged in a way that fall a heavier burden upon those who ought to feel them most lightly.

He advocated a revision of the tariff in a two-fold direction and for two reasons. First of all, duty should be raised upon articles of real luxury used only by the few, such as laces, silks, satin and pianos. This, he regarded, was not imposing a duty for the sake of Protection, but upon luxury for the sake of revenue. But if, incidentally, you give protective benefit to industry at home, so much the better.

This sound doctrine is growing in England, although the Government, as the cable despatches inform us, is inclined to refuse to appoint a royal commission, on the ground that the inquiry would "have no practical result." The real reason for the refusal is the fear that such a commission would be construed as evidence of the fallibility of Free Trade. The people, however, and especially the working classes, are bound to have this royal commission, and the Tories, seeing that it is a winning card, will continue to urge it.

Worth Remembering.

[Chicago Inter-Ocean.]

The speeches of James G. Blaine, over a hundred, great and small, made during his memorable tour in the past two months, constitute the most brilliant additions to the political literature of this country to the honor of any one man since the days of Daniel Webster. In matter, in variety, in dignity of tone, in elegance of diction, they have been beyond criticism, above attack, and in some instances have delighted by sparkling epigram, charmed with the rare beauty of perfectly expressed ideas, and at all times have shown the brilliant mind, the profound intelligence, and the graceful scholarship that ennoble the man and distinguish the statesman.

Aside from their political significance these speeches are valuable as embracing the best forms of oration, the purest literary fullness, and the most trenchant rhetoric, intellectual vigor coupled with exquisite language. They are the more remarkable for being almost entirely impromptu and yet standing the test of comparison one with another. No two speeches are alike, and ideas are reiterated only to the extent necessary in the frequent presentation of certain unalterable truths. Among these jewels of utterance there are numerous sentences that deserve to be inscribed on pages of memory to themselves as apothegms defining or emphasizing the highest worth of government and citizenship.

When the campaign has been ended, when enmities now rife are removed, when the thoughtful turn to a review of this extraordinary struggle, the choice nuggets of wisdom will be carefully gathered from these speeches and converted to the perpetual enrichment of our general literature; and in some of them will be heard the ringing prophecy of inevitable future events. A merely cursory and by no means systematic look through the telegraphic reports of these extraordinary speeches will discover in nearly every one from first to last sentences like those we quote by way of illustration of the whole.

"It is the safeguards of republics that they are not adapted to aggressive war."

"I know that, without suffrage, woman cast often the weightiest vote. I know that the great moral strength, showing itself constantly in political strength with which the Republican party has been inspired for its struggles and its triumphs, has come from the gracious and pure influence of woman."

"The Republican party is not on trial. If it has made mistakes, they have been merged and forgotten in the greater success which has corrected them. If it has had internal differences, they have been laid aside. If it has had factional strife, I am sure that has ceased."

"There is no safety for any man's civil rights unless respect be paid to the civil rights of all."

"Let the strength, the influence, the prestige of the Republican party go to the upbuilding of the new South, and so long as loyalty has a friend, or the flag has a follower, let not the old South triumph."

"Do citizens fully comprehend what it means to trust the National credit, the National finances, the National pensions, the protective system, and all the great interests which are under the control of the National Government, to the old South, with its bitterness, its unreconciled temper, its narrowness of vision, its hostility to all Northern interests, its constant longing to revive an impossible past, its absolute incapacity to measure the sweep and the magnitude of our great future?"

"I confess I should wish no prouder distinction for the United States of America than to initiate a movement that might in the wide sweep of its beneficent influence incorporate the principles of friendly arbitration as a permanent part of the international code of the world without intermeddling in the affairs of other nations."

"The true policy of government should be based on the eternal principles of justice."

"It has been the aim and the desire of the Republican party to develop the material interests of the South, and to make her people forget and the Nation forget that we have ever been foes, remembering that we are citizens of a common Union, under a common constitution, looking to a common destiny."

"A community that combines agriculture and manufactures has the necessary conditions for attaining an ideal prosperity."

"To give the Democrats control would mean a change the like of which has not been known in modern times. It would be as if the dead Stuarts were recalled to the throne of England; as if the Bourbons should be invited to administer the government of France; as though the Florentine Dukes should be called back and empowered to govern the great Kingdom of Italy. Such a triumph would be a fearful misfortune to the South itself."

"I am reproached by some excellent people for appearing before these multitudes of my countrymen on the ground that it is inconsistent with the dignity of the office for which I am named. I do not feel it to be so. There is not a courtier in Europe so proud that he is not glad to uncover his head in the presence of his sovereign. So I uncover in the presence of the only earthly sovereignty I acknowledge, and bow with pride to the free people of America."

"The struggle in all human society is first for bread. There is no use propounding fine theories to a man who is hungry. There is no use in commending a political principle to one who is in need of shelter; there is no use in talking philosophy to one who is naked. Food and clothing are the primary requirements of human society, the primary elements of human progress, and to secure this you must put the people in the way of earning good wages."

"I never saw any man moved to enthusiasm by silently contemplating the prosperity of another while he himself was in need."

"The beginning and the end of wise legislation is to give every man a fair and equal chance, and to leave the race of life open and free to all."

"No distinction can be tolerated among those who are clothed with the honor of American citizenship."

"The protection of labor is the security of the fireside."

"If we desire to keep our Nation up let us maintain those principles upon which alone a true republic can rest."

"Agriculture, manufacture, and commerce are the triple cords which, bound together, make up the strength of National prosperity. They were designed to go together."

"A party which began its existence by resisting slavery naturally and inevitably became the protector of free labor."

Intimidation in the South.

THE LOREAUVILLE RIOT PRECONCERTED—FOREWARNED OF AN ATTACK—ARRESTED WITHOUT LEGAL WARRANT.

Felix Bienvenu, postmaster at St. Martinsville, makes the following statement concerning the Loreauville affair:

I left St. Martinsville to companay with my uncle for Loreauville last Saturday. I had hardly gone two miles when I met a friend living near by, who stopped me and asked where I was going. I replied, "To Loreauville." He said to me: "Don't go there; for I have been notified by the principal Democratic leaders there to be on hand, as they intend to prevent a Republican meeting from taking place." I arrived at Loreauville and was asked by the most prominent men—Democrats of good standing—"What are you looking for? There may be bloodshed; for drunkards are drinking heavily and want to prevent the Republicans' meeting from taking place." At the same time I saw from twelve to fifteen persons yelling and shouting, going from one saloon to another, until about half-past one o'clock in the afternoon, when Judge Fontelieu and his crowd arrived, and entered the yard of Alfred Gonsoulin, to hold their meeting. The use of the yard had been previously secured for that purpose. On their arrival I saw and heard men calling repeatedly, "Come on, boys." They came from a grog shop belonging to St. Clair Dugas, about 200 yards from the meeting place. On their arrival, Joe Gilfour, I was told, by one eye-witness, fired the first shot, and these shots were returned by the attacked parties. Some 400 or 500 shots were fired, with the result of dead and wounded, as reported in the papers. The attacking parties then went to their headquarters, and returned with ten or twelve guns. They surrounded the dwelling of Gonsoulin, shooting at every negro passing within their reach, even at those who went into the bayou in trying to save themselves. About fifty of the State militia came at 5 o'clock and arrested the Fontelieu men exclusively, taking them prisoners on Judge Gate's verbal order, without a deputy sheriff to represent the authorities. This was stated to me when enroute to New Iberia with the prisoners that same night, by the lieutenant commanding.

The following night message was received at Republican National Headquarters yesterday:

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 3, 1884.

The Hon. B. F. Jones, Chairman Republican National Committee:

The riot yesterday in Iberia Parish was brought about by armed Democrats firing on the speakers and assembled Republicans at a Blaine mass meeting. All the Blaine speakers were arrested by a local authority and put in jail, without warrant of law. All the Democratic perpetrators are at liberty. The committee have information of a premeditated plan to carry into effect the same method in other parishes, especially Ascension, St. Mary's, Terrebonne, and Orleans.

JAS. BADGER,
Chairman Republican Campaign Committee.

Patti Again in New York.

MR. MAPLESON'S TROUPE ARRIVES—A TALK WITH THE MANAGER AND WITH MME. PATTI.

The City of Berlin, which arrived off New York Quarantine early Sunday morning, had on board no less a person than James H. Mapleson, formerly manager of Her Majesty's Opera Company, and at present manager of the Italian Opera Company, which this day week will make its appearance at the Academy of Music. With Mr. Mapleson was his entire opera company, the only members not on board the City of Berlin being Madame Patti, who arrived, however, yesterday on the Oregon, and Mlle. Emma Nevada, who will sail in a week's time from the other side upon the Umbria.

As good looking, high spirited and genial as ever Mr. Mapleson walked into the New York Hotel, about 11 A. M. and secured his usual room which luckily happened to be vacant. He shook hands with the whole establishment and called them collectively and individually "his dear boys;" placed a choice hot house rose in his button hole, and thus armed for victory strode forth to his battle ground, the Academy, where for the next few hours he plunged into the details of the operatic campaign. He then went on board the Blackbird, which had already steamed down the bay with deputations of welcome and along band to meet him, and went off to meet Mme. Patti, as the Oregon had been sighted.

"How did you manage about Mme. Patti's guarantee?"

Mr. Mapleson winked portentously as he answered: "We won't say much about that just now, dear boy. We'll see what the directors are going to do about it, but for the present we'll be magnanimous. It might refer to last season and any thrill should be surprised if the British Government were to attach Sir Garnet Wolseley's sword and uniform when he returns victorious from Khartoum. But I will not draw any parallels. I have returned as a conqueror. Italian opera at the Metropolitan has vanished from existence. I paid Patti $8,000 in cash, thinking that the directors would, as usual, guarantee the amount of the assessment, when I could pay her the other $16,000, the remainder of the amount of the last six nights of her engagement at $4,000 a night. Well, there was some hitch, so I managed to persuade her that it would be all right and she has come. I imagine it will be all right. There was something said in the telegrams about Nilsson which I don't understand. I suppose they mean Nevada."

WHO FORM THE COMPANY.

"As to your company?"

"That will surprise you all. I have been ever since I left here living on the railroad, traveling from London to Paris, to Milan, to Vienna. Dodging the quarantine and risking the cholera is no easy work. I have got a magnificent company, and if there is not novelty enough in the programme the artists supply the deficiency. There is Nevada for instance. And there is Ricetti, whose voice is of great volume and richness, reminding me of dear old Tietjens. Cardinali, my leading tenor, comes next, to Tamagno, and Moliul. He is young, good looking and has a superb voice. De Anna, the leading baritone, has a voice equal to Galassi's voice four years ago. He has the high notes which nowadays are indispensable to baritones. Blasetti, my second tenor, is an American from Detroit. His real name is Bassett and he has a charming voice. Seglehi, Lablache and Cherubini I need say nothing about, as you all know them."

"Then you anticipate a good season?"

"The best I have ever had. Patti opens in the 'Barbiere,' being only the second time she has ever sung it here. Nevada will open in 'La Sonnambula.' I feel that the way is clear before me, and I think that the fact of its being the last time that Patti will ever sing here ought to be very much in my favor. Of course, though, I expect the directors will help me to some extent."

A CHAT WITH MME. PATTI.

Madame Patti, Signor Nicolini, the parrot and the diamonds, arrived at the Windsor Hotel about half-past 8 o'clock last evening. Madame Patti was dressed in a close-fitting dark travelling dress brightened by a brilliant scarlet plastron in front. She seemed thoroughly wearied, and her first salutation was:

"I am so tired that I can barely speak. I am delighted to have got back, though it was at the expense of a tedious, rough voyage. I feel melancholy, too, for this is really and positively the last time I shall come to America."

"Have you passed a pleasant summer?"

"Delightful. We had lots of Americans stopping with us at the Castle, and the place grows dearer to me year after year. I sang in Liverpool just before sailing at the Philharmonic, but before that I, had a good long rest. We had a very rough voyage over and the poor steward fell and broke his leg. Then, as soon as Mapleson came on board, he told me about poor Brignoli's death. I felt so grieved, and I asked if I could not do something to defray his funeral expenses, for I hear that he died poor. But I find that has all been done. You may remember that he sang with me on my first appearance here more years ago than I care to count."

Madame Patti looked with evident longing toward the room where dinner was being laid.

"I am so tired," said she, "that you must really excuse my saying anything more. What after all is there for me to say? I speak but the simple truth when I say that I am very, very glad to be back in America, and I am glad that my first appearance will be in the 'Barbiere,' for it is such a pretty opera."

AT MR. BLAINE'S HOME

[illegible]

[illegible] ... news from other counties ... the returns which had been received ... majority of eleven thousand. ... other reports were received of the same general purport but these were the most definite and satisfactory. ... last night Mr Blaine's friends kept dropping in to get information about the election, and while there were still doubts about New York, ... busied themselves in making calculations to show how the Republican candidates could be elected without the Empire State. About noon congratulatory telegrams began to come in like the following.

BROOKLYN, N Y Nov 5

Libel and slander have met their Waterloo. There is a God in Israel. I heartily congratulate you.

J. R. ALLERTON"

PHILADELPHIA, Nov 5

Sincerest congratulations on your hard fought fight and glorious victory

D. R. BALCH"

CLEVELAND, O, Nov 5

I congratulate you and the country on the [illegible] victory which I believe is now assured

AMOS TOWNSEND"

About noon Senator Mahone telegraphed a confirmation of the report previously received from John S Wise that Virginia had gone Republican. This news was very consolatory to those of Mr. Blaine's friends who were still doubtful about New York. Early in the evening a despatch was received announcing that California had declared for Blaine and Logan by a majority of ten thousand, Nevada by a good majority and Oregon by a thousand. Several discouraging despatches were received from Indiana, which had previously been regarded as certain for the Republicans, but Mr. Blaine's friends were not disturbed because they claimed that their candidate could be elected without it.

About nine o'clock [illegible] a message was received from Mr. Michener, Secretary of the Indiana Republican State Committee stating that although the State was close, Blaine and Logan would almost certainly have [illegible].

Almost immediately after this came the following from New York: "I have accurate returns from every election district save 187 in the State, and [illegible] I am sure you have carried the State. S. B. French, Superintendent of the Board of Police." From New Orleans came the announcement of [illegible] Republican [illegible] Congress and from Wisconsin and Michigan [illegible] that these States were all right.

Mr Blaine remained quietly at home [illegible] receiving returns [illegible] to which he would have been subjected had he remained during his [illegible] as he did last evening. About ten o'clock a private despatch was received announcing great Republican gains in Indiana and the State as certain for Blaine and Logan. [illegible] despatches [illegible] widely separated points [illegible] of Blaine's election [illegible] over the country. [illegible]

Election of Congressmen—Twelve Republicans and Eight Democrats.

CHICAGO Nov 5 The returns show the following results of Congress: First District J W Dunham Rep, second [illegible], third J H Ward, [illegible] fourth [illegible] Adams Rep, fifth [illegible] sixth [illegible], seventh [illegible]. [illegible]

INDIANA.

The Republicans Claim a Steadily Increasing [illegible] Plurality of 1,000

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind Nov 5 [illegible]

IOWA

A Sweeping Republican Victory

NEW YORK, Nov 5 It is believed the Republicans of Iowa have elected their candidates in the first, third, fifth, seventh, eighth, ninth, tenth and eleventh districts [illegible] elected by 500 to 1 200 majority [illegible]

OHIO

Great Gains over the October Election

COLUMBUS Nov 5 Six hundred and sixty-eight out of 2 017 precincts in Ohio give a net Republican gain of 11,014 over the vote of last month [illegible]. This vote would give the Republicans a plurality of 47 [illegible], which will probably be reduced by returns from the rural districts.

CONNECTICUT

No Election of Governor—Legislature Strongly Republican—A Probable Plurality for Cleveland

HARTFORD Nov 5 Cleveland has a plurality in Connecticut of about 1000. Governor Waller falls of a majority in the State by about 1 200. The election of the State officers in Connecticut goes to the Legislature, which is largely Republican, and will elect Hon Henry B Harrison and also re-elect Senator O H Platt to the United States Senate.

LAST NIGHT'S DESPATCHES

INDIANA.

Claimed by Both Sides.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 5 There is every indication that the vote in this State will be very close. The Democratic Committee claims the State by 5 000. The Republican Committee is equally confident, but does not give figures.

Indications Favor the Republicans

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 5 Six hundred and seventy-three voting places show a Republican gain of 5 203, which indicates a plurality for Blaine in the State of 3,000 if the rate of gain continues.

Mr Hendricks Claims Indiana but Concedes the Loss of New York

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 5 Mr Hendricks said to-night "I firmly believe Indiana has gone Democratic by a decisive majority and am inclined to extend my estimate to 8 000."

If the Associated Press figures are correct they settle New York State against Cleveland. The divisions in the Democratic vote between Cleveland and Butler was due to the employment of the latter to work in the interest of Blaine. [illegible] no doubt Butler was working for the Republican managers.

At the Democratic Committee rooms, while the claim of carrying the State by 10 000 is still kept up, a further claim is made that the Republicans are [illegible] returns to deceive the people. Mr. Henderson says the Democrats have elected 10 Congressmen. The 8th and 9th districts are in doubt.

The State Claimed by Both parties

Chairman [illegible] says [illegible] and Steele are elected to Congress and the first district is in doubt and is claimed by both parties.

NEW YORK.

The Vote of New York City—43 233 Plurality for Cleveland

NEW YORK Nov 5 Returns from all the election districts in the city give Cleveland a plurality of 43 233 over Blaine. The city and county ticket of the County Democracy headed by ex Mayor Grace for Mayor is elected, excepting the Coroner [illegible] Deputy Coroner [illegible] is elected Coroner by 10 000 majority.

The World and Herald Claim New York for Cleveland

NEW YORK Nov 5 The World and Herald claim that New York State is Democratic by a small majority while the Tribune still claim it for the Republicans. Returns from all parts of the State show Cleveland [illegible]

An Albany Democratic Estimate

ALBANY, N Y Nov 5 [illegible] a Democratic majority in the State of 3 [illegible] believed to be Democratic [illegible] 500 either way.

Blaine's Plurality will Reach 80 000

PHILADELPHIA Nov 5 Official returns from seven counties in this State and a careful estimate from others indicate a plurality of 70 000 for Blaine.

COLORADO.

Good for 3 000 Majority

DENVER, Nov 5 Returns from the interior of the State are [illegible] complete. None of the [illegible] however to insure the Republican ticket the usual majority of about 3 000. [illegible] Republican is probably elected Governor by a small majority. Symes, Republican for Congress, will fall behind the National ticket, but is probably elected.

ILLINOIS.

Claimed by 20 000 Majority

CHICAGO, Nov 5 The chairman of the Republican State Committee claimed during the afternoon 20 000 Republican majority for governor and a Republican majority in both branches of the Legislature. [illegible]

NEBRASKA.

A Majority of 17 000 Indicated

LINCOLN, Nov 5 The First Congressional District is doubtful. The Democrats claim the election of Brown. Fifty-two precincts heard from give Blaine 2,547 majority, which further estimates have increased to 4,037. This is nearly one-third of the States and indicates a majority of 17 00. For Governor, Morton, Democrat, runs ahead of his ticket, and Dawes' majority will be below 10,000. Returns are coming in slowly and in a confused state.

CALIFORNIA.

Blaine Gains on Garfield's Vote

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov 5 Two hundred and eighty six precincts and wards in 41 counties give Blaine 28,020, Cleveland 21,8_0. The same places gave Garfield 21,874 and Hancock 18,718.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Overwhelmingly Democratic

WILMINGTON, N C Nov 5 The State has gone so overwhelmingly Democratic [illegible] the Democrats have carried the 1st, 3d, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th Congressional Districts and the Republicans have carried the 2d district, a Democratic gain of one Congressman. It is [illegible] that the Democrats have [illegible] two-thirds majority in the Legislature.

CONNECTICUT.

For Cleveland by About 1 [illegible] 00

HARTFORD Nov 5 The vote of Connecticut [illegible] with the small town of Washington to hear from is 133 [illegible] Blaine 65 738, Cleveland 63 [illegible], St John 2 205, Butler 1 687. Cleveland's plurality 1 [illegible]

The Governor Vote Entire

HARTFORD Ct Nov 5 The total vote for Governor in Connecticut, every town being heard from, is 137 [illegible] Harrison, Republican 65,13 [illegible] Waller, Democrat [illegible] Pulne, Prohibitionist 1 84 [illegible] Curtis, Butler 1 3 [illegible] Waller's plurality [illegible] Waller's minority 884. The Legislature which is [illegible] Republican will elect a Republican State ticket and re-elect United States Senator O H Platt. Senate 17 Republicans to 7 Democrats, a Republican gain of four. The House of Representatives stands 160 Republicans to 89 Democrats, a Republican gain of 10. The Republican majority on joint ballot is 81, last year [illegible]

The Republicans Gain One Congressman

HARTFORD Nov 5 [illegible] Republican is elected for Congress in the First District over [illegible] Democrat [illegible] 310 [illegible] Mitchell, Democrat, is elected over [illegible] plurality.

[New York Evening Post.]

A delicious sauce for plain rice pudding is made by stewing some apples and grapes until perfectly soft, then rub them through a sieve, sweeten, put a lump of butter in, and if too thin stir in a little cornstarch.

Beef fritters are nice for breakfast; chop pieces of steak or cold roast beef very fine. Make a batter of milk, flour, and an egg, and mix the meat with it. Put a lump of butter into a saucepan, let it melt, then drop the batter into it from a large spoon. Fry until brown; season with pepper and salt and a little parsley.

A delicious filling for a cake is made by putting one cup of powdered sugar into a saucepan with one quarter of a cupful of water. Let them simmer gently until the sugar is entirely dissolved, and in fact, until it is still when dropped into cold water, then add to it the white of one egg beaten to a froth. Half a cup of chopped walnut meats and a tablespoonful of cocoanut, add a few drops of vanilla also.

An easy way to arrange a centrepiece for a luncheon table is to take two low glass dishes on standards, and set one within the other. The top one may be filled with fruit and the lower with foliage and flowers, or you can use an ordinary cake basket for the lower part, and set a shallow glass dish upon it. Centre pieces are not so high as formerly, and are arranged with greater delicacy, attention being given to each particular leaf and flower.

A Newport correspondent sends this description of a room in a villa at Pau. "The room was as pretty," she writes, "as it was inexpensive. The walls were covered with chintz; the pattern was a Japanese figure on a white ground. These hangings were panelled with Turkey red. From the ceiling hung festoons of the turkey red. The furniture was covered with chintz just like that upon the walls, and the tidies on the backs and arms of the chairs were of Turkey red. The furniture was entirely covered, and no wood was visible. The floor was of wood, and was nearly covered with a large rug. A few stands of black wood completed the furniture, with the exception of some china ornaments. It was all of so little cost, and yet the effect was simply delightful." The correspondent does not state how the chintz was fastened to the wall. It could possibly be pasted or tacked. This fancy might be applied to those rooms which one would like to have in certain colors, blue or pink, with good effect.

Some time, when oranges are plenty, and consequently cheap, try this old-time recipe for making preserves of them: Grate the thin outer portion of the rind, then squeeze out all the juice and pulp; put the oranges into cold water, and let them lie there for one day and night; meanwhile, weigh the juice, and pulp, and grated peel; allow twice their weight of sugar; boil them altogether until the syrup looks clear, taking care to skim off any scum that rises; put this in a cool place until the oranges have been in the water the required time; then cut the oranges into small pieces, drain them well, put them into some fresh water, just enough to cover them, add sugar in the proportion of half a pound to one pint of water; when they have boiled in this until they are tender, add the pulp, etc. Let them boil then for ten minutes, after which they are ready to be put away in cans. Instead of cutting the oranges into small pieces, you may chop them very fine.

If you fear that preserves of any kind are liable to ferment, they should be heated to the boiling point and thoroughly scalded, to be safe for the winter. The same is true of soup stock.

A tidy made of crazy patch-work is a novelty. The pieces chosen for it were small, and the embroidery was delicate, and very pretty. The patch-work was pressed so that it was perfectly smooth. The border was a red satin ribbon an inch and three-quarters or possibly two inches wide, and this had a vine worked on it in crazy-colored silk.

A pretty dish for dessert is made by dissolving half a box of gelatine in half a pint of cold water, then add half a pint of boiling water. Sweeten to your taste, and add any flavoring extract you prefer. Let the gelatine "come to a boil" after you have added the sugar. Take some bananas and peel them and cut them in slices, or lengthwise if they are not too long, lay them into a deep fruit dish, sprinkle sugar over them, and after putting two or three layers in in this way, pour the gelatine over them. Let this harden, and you have a dainty dish. If you choose you can use part oranges and part bananas.

If you have soiled white Spanish or ecru Guipure lace, do not throw it aside as worthless, for it may be colored with some of the dyes now to be found in small packages. The lace may then be used in a great many ways. One way is to trim the edge of tidies made of strips of ribbon and lace, or of ribbon and velvet, or of all those novelties for the backs of chairs made of a strip of plain silk placed on each side of a very elegant strip of crazy patchwork.

Green tomatoes are very nice if cut into thin slices and rolled in flour and fried in butter and lard mixed.

Fried apples make a nice entree; cut across the core in slices, and then brown them in lard, or butter and lard mixed; drain them and serve them hot. They make a nice garnish for roast pork when prepared in this way. Some cooks use beef drippings instead of lard and like the flavor better.

Scent-sachets are very pretty if for a covering you use two shades of ribbon and put them together in basket work. Stitch the ribbons with fine silk of the same color, so that they will keep their place.

Pretty table-mats are made of a kind of momie cloth which is quite heavy and is figured; that with a white ground and with pink rosebuds is particularly suitable. The mats should be of various sizes, and oblong, not round, and the edges are finished with white cotton fringe.

Mock strawberry short-cake is thus described by one who made it: "A can of peaches was opened and the large pieces were cut into small ones; then some 'King' apples were stewed a little, and were cut into small pieces also and mixed with the peaches in the proportion of one apple to nearly three peaches. A nice short-cake was made, and baked, and the fruit spread upon it, with sugar sprinkled over it and with a liberal allowance of thick sweet cream."

Joe Shafer and the Bear.

A LEGISLATIVE CANDIDATE'S LIVELY EXPERIENCE IN THE WILDS OF CAMERON COUNTY.

[Philadelphia Times.]

"Between running for the legislature and hunting bears, Joe M. Shafer is having a lively time up in Cameron county," remarked "Ritchey" Bridgens, ex-mayor of Lock Haven, at the Fulton House last evening.

"What's happened to Joe now?" inquired A. J. Schuyler, the proprietor and owner of the finest sooner dog in Clinton county.

"A great deal has happened to him," replied the old Ironclad Democrat. "You know Joe is famous for hunting, and would rather follow a bear all day than stop to eat the best dinner that could be set before him."

"Has he been hunting again?"

"Yes; I am just informed by a friend from Sinnemahoning that he started out yesterday to electioneer a little for member, and passing over the mountain in the direction of Driftwood, he struck bear tracks. That was enough. He forgot all about the office of member and started after the bear. He carried his silver-mounted Remington that was presented to him by a few friends at Harrisburg on the adjournment of the legislature."

"How did the hunt end?"

"He had scarcely traveled a mile when he came up with the bear. It was sitting on a hemlock log, apparently waiting for Joe. He stopped suddenly, drew up and fired, and then looked to see if the bear had been hit."

"Was he?"

"Yes, in the right leg, but not badly hurt. This riled the bear, and frightened Joe because he had made a bad shot."

"What then?"

"The bear became greatly enraged, and made a rush for Joe, who dashed behind a big hemlock tree and commenced running around it, thinking to elude the bear. But it travelled so fast that he couldn't get a chance to fire another shot, and after being chased around the tree for half an hour and getting pretty tired, Joe concluded to change the programme. He suddenly made a dash, and jumping over the trunk of a fallen hemlock, made for a big tree with low branches."

"Did he succeed?"

"No; he made a failure. Just as he was in the act of climbing up the tree the bear caught him with one paw and, as he was in the act of giving him a square Cameron county hug, a friend came up and shot the bear through the head, and Joe was saved."

"That was a pretty close call for the honorable gentleman," said Schuyler.

"It was that; and Joe admits that he thought he would never get back to Harrisburg again. I believe the bear intended to punish him for taking that money out of the State treasury at the end of the special session."

"Did he pocket all?"

"Yes, every cent; he didn't put back a single penny, but bragged that he would have taken more if the law had allowed him."

"How much did he get?"

"Over $3,000. I never believed it was right, and I believe the bear was on the watch for him when he started out 'lectioneering for another term. Cameron county bears, you know, are very sagacious, and I am told they are very plenty this fall in the Sinnemahoning mountains, too."

"Ritchey" then put on his hat and started down Water street, soliloquizing to himself that he never did believe in that special session of the legislature, that he believed it was a scheme to rob the treasury, and he hoped the bears would yet get all those concerned in it.

The New Anaesthetic.

INTERESTING EXPERIMENTS WITH THE DISCOVERY IN ALBANY.

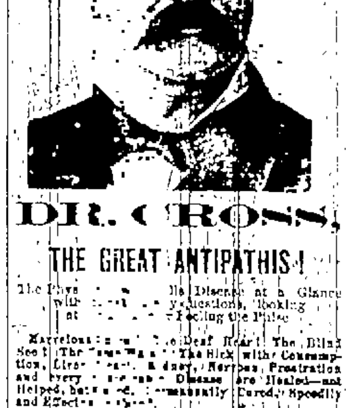

[From the Albany Argus.]

Dr. C. S. Merrill, at his college clinic yesterday afternoon, after presenting to the students several patients whom he had before treated or operated on, lectured briefly on the nature and effects of the hydrochlorate of cocaine, and used it on some of the cases in the presence of the class. The doctor stated that the drug was prepared from the leaves of the cocoa plant, and had been used in the throat clinics of Vienna for about a year—the throat and larynx being brushed with it to produce anaesthesia of those parts for operative work, and that the first knowledge we had of its action as a local anaesthetic for the eye was from a paper by Dr. Kollar of Vienna, read at the Heidelberg college of ophthalmologists on the 15th of September, and Dr. Kollar had only discovered its peculiar properties two weeks before that meeting.

The doctor took a young lady who was to be operated on for a closure of the tear passage, and put eight drops of the cocoaine solution into the eye. Ten minutes later the eye was found to be so thoroughly anaesthetized that it could be grasped with forceps and pulled around without causing pain. He then did the operation without the patient's experiencing any pain, although the operation without an anaesthetic is exceedingly painful. In another case an old man over seventy years of age, who had long suffered from a severe inflammation of the deeper parts of the eye, was placed on the operating table and the cocoaine used as in the other case, but it did not produce entire insensibility of the parts, nor did it in another case where there was severe inflammation of the deeper tissues. The doctor concluded from these two cases that where there was such severe inflammation more of the drug should be used and a longer time allowed for its effect to be produced. He stated that he had used it in normal eyes, and sensation had been abolished in from ten to fifteen minutes and returned in about thirty or forty minutes.

By using it Dr. Merrill has been able to do an operation for squint, to remove foreign bodies from the cornea, and in the case of an abscess in the middle ear, to lance the drum membrane without causing pain.

The drug is a rare one and at present very expensive, what the doctor used costing at the rate of $420 per ounce, or $6720 per pound. No doubt, as the demand for it increases, it will be manufactured in larger quantities and become much cheaper. It is to be hoped that it will be produced in such quantities as to permit of experiments being made with it in other portions of the body, for we are justified in anticipating that it will render many of the general operations painless.

WARREN LELAND, whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the Largest Hotel Enterprises of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of emigration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AYER'S SARSAPARILLA in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND'S farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND'S direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. LELAND has personally used Ayer's Sarsaparilla for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of High Living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. LELAND'S permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. LELAND'S extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.

PREPARED BY Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all Druggists; $1, six bottles for $5.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs, none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER." Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours, MRS. EMMA GEDNEY." 159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE." Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN." Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON." Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

THE DISGUSTED LOOK

That you will sometimes see on the wearer of a new suit of clothes—as though their porous-plaster had slipped out of place, or their liver-pad had sprung aleak, is often the result of neither of the above annoying happenstances, but because he did not see our ad. in time to get the benefit of the discount of 10 per cent. from regular prices that we give on Custom Clothing.
